

At this point, a member of the public spoke against the following proposal, on the permission of the Chairman. When she had purchased a neighbouring property she had been aware of plans for one single-storey new dwelling to be built on the site and had no objection. She regarded the new proposal to be “over-development” which would be particularly out of place at this “gateway” to the town. She objected to the fact that windows in the proposed properties would overlook her property, and there would also be a loss of light to her.
